DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kim et al (US Patent 5,643,531) or Roman et al (US Patent 5,376,191).

Claims 10 and 14 of Kim et al. and claim 1 of Roman, each teach a method of forming a hardened surface on a substrate comprising providing a substrate and forming a metallic glass coating on the substrate. Even though the hardness of at least about 9.2 GPa as recited by the claim is not taught by prior art, such would be inherent since a similar amorphous Fe-Cr-B composition having a very high hardness is disclosed, and also in absence of proof to the contrary.

Claims 1 to 70 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Branagan et al (US Patent 6,258,185B1).

Branagan in claims 14 to 20 in columns 11 and 12 discloses a method of forming a hardened surface on a substrate comprising providing a substrate and forming a metallic glass coating on the substrate wherein the metallic glass comprises Fe, Cr, B, Mo, W, C, Si, La, Ti in weight % ranges which encompasses the specific materials recited by the claims. Moreover, Branagan in lines 42 to 56, column 4, and claim 17, column 12 discloses metallic glass coating is applied by plasma spray or atomizing powder. Also claim 15, column 12 discloses a metallic glass coating comprising a successive build up of continuous layers. In regard to claims 10 and 11, note that Branagan in claim 6, column 11 teaches heating the metallic glass to a temperature of at least 600C and less than a melting temperature of the glass.

Although the prior art does not teach the metallic glass coating and the crystalline material having a hardness of at least about 9.2 GPa, such hardness would be expected since the compositional and microstructural and process limitations are closely met, and in absence of proof to the contrary.
